

Explore imaginative ways to teach

JM International School, Dwarka conducted a seven-day training programme on 'Puppetry as a teaching method'. In a generation of multimedia and high-tech gadgets for teaching and learning, a traditional method of creating a fun-filled atmosphere for learning was advocated during the session.

The instructor led the workshop with his artistic techniques on creating various characters through puppetry. The participants had a hands-on training on ways to create their own puppets, which could later be used for teaching in their respective areas. The aim of the workshop was to introduce puppetry as an aid to education. It also focused on the production of simple puppets out of easily available waste materials to convey educational concepts. Different kinds of puppetry making like bunraku puppets, glove puppets and shadow puppets, etc made the workshop interesting.

Times NIE

Date:

16/7/2015