When our interest is aroused in something, whether it is an academic subject or a hobby, we enjoy working hard at it. We come to feel that we can in some way own it and use it to make sense of the world around us". Coupled with the need to establish the relevance of content, we instructors need to craft explanations that enable students to understand the material. This involves knowing what students understand and then forging connections between what is known and what is new.

In this regard a workshop for teachers on Effective teaching methods in English language was organised in ITL Public School by one of the leading publishers Ratna Sagar in which many participants from neighbouring schools also took part. The resource person for the workshop was Ms. Leena Kapoor who delved upon the topic of synthetic phonetics in an interesting manner. The participants learnt about jolly phonetics which can be introduced in the Pre- Primary stage to drill the correct pronunciation of vowel and consonants sounds in a jolly way.
